

The city of Kenosha has fixed the license fee of saloons at $200.

Ex-President Hayes would rather cultivate his farm than be governor of Ohio. This is practical wisdom.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun to-morrow, but will not be visible in any part of the United States.

Justice Stanley Matthews, of the United States supreme court, lost four of his children in one month, and the last and youngest is hopelessly sick.

The crop of cotton in the south this year will be greater than the crop of politics. The south is learning how to make that part of the Union prosperous.

A woman down in Louisville sat on the side of the bed and lit her pipe and smoked, and the ashes falling from the pipe set the bed-clothes on fire. There was a funeral soon after that.

The saloons in Des Moines, Iowa, are still closed, with no prospect of opening under the $1,000 license. There is nothing but the temperance people like to see more than a strike among the saloons.

Snow has fallen on the Northern Pacific railway this month, and in some places quite heavily. If that promised famous route is covered with snow in May, how deep will the fall be in January?

The cruel cigar war is now over, and the result can be fairly estimated. The strikers will get one-third of the government reduction, the manufacturers one-third, and the retail dealers may possibly get one-third. The smokers should now strike for a reduction.

Mr. Tilden has just commenced his boom for 1883. He has given $200 of his ten millions, to Mrs. McKelham, granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson, as a contribution to a relief fund. Mr. Tilden was particular that the country should hear of this gift, as he doesn't often give away his money.

There comes a warning to democratic free-traders from Tennessee, which the northern free-traders cannot offer to ignore. The Nashville American, the official organ of the democracy of Tennessee, speaks courageously in saying: "Gentlemen who are pushing the tariff for revenue only" doctrine had better stop and think. The democratic party can't stand this doctrine. Men who have not lost themselves in an abstraction must see that the American people will to more abandon the doctrine of protecting their industries and labor, by discriminating in favor of such industries as need protection, in levying duties on imports, than they would shut off the rainfall and resort to irrigation were it in their power to do so. The doctrine is founded in the soundest principles of political economy."

It was said sometime ago by Mr. William Winter, dramatic editor of the New York Tribune, that Miss Mary Anderson, was the hope of the American stage. Mr. Winter was not mistaken. During the Cincinnati festival, and when "The Hunchback" was performed on Tuesday night, Miss Anderson won the honors of that night. John McCullough and Lawrence Barrett took on the stage and took prominent parts in the play, but their powerful prestige and glowing fame did not overshadow Miss Anderson. Her Julia was one of the brightest performances of the festival and time after time she was called before the curtain, and at one time a stand of white flowers, five feet high, bearing the significant words, "America's Pride," was presented to her amid applause that fairly shook the great music hall. She was so admirably good that Mr. Winter, the finest and the ablest of all our dramatic critics, was forced to declare that "the night belonged exclusively to Mary Anderson."

Both Sheridan and Walsh are defiant in their attitude in regard to their indictment by the grand jury at Dublin. Both have said that when the government wants them they will be found at the "Irish World" office in New York. There is a very strong probability that the English government may demand Sheridan and Walsh, and if it does, the United States will be compelled to arrest them, give them into the hands of British officers who will carry them to Dublin where they will be tried for the murder Lord Cavendish and Under Secretary Burke. What the result of their trials will be cannot be foretold. Both affirm their innocence, and Mr. Sheridan says he would not be afraid to stand a trial if he thought he would be fairly tried. The rapidity with which five of the murderers have been tried and put under sentence of death, impresses some people with the idea that they have not had an impartial trial. But the claim of evidence was so closely linked, and all the circumstances connected with the murder so clearly proven, that there was nothing for the juries to do but to find the prisoners guilty. Whether this will be the case with regard to Sheridan and Walsh, can only be told by a trial. If they are innocent, the best way is to prove it by returning to Dublin.

WHAT THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION SHOULD DO.

Because Mr. De B. Randolph Keim, who has been nominated for chief examiner of the civil service commission, does not put his name exactly in the middle, there is much fun poked at him by the opposition press. It is true that his appointment was a surprise and a disappointment to the ardent friends of civil service reform, and why Mr. Keim should be given such a responsible place as the commissioner no one could clearly understand, not even some of his personal friends.

The attacks on Mr. Keim come from all quarters and are made on the alleged ground that he has not the ability to properly fill the office, neither has he a warm side for civil service reform. These attacks all along the line are giving Mr. Keim much notoriety, and it is said that he really enjoys them. He likes to be mentioned in the newspapers, and it doesn't make much difference to him whether the mention is complimentary or otherwise. He is happy in the possession of a little notoriety, and while his appointment hangs over on account of his unfitness, he smiles to see his name spread all over the country.

But this business of appointing a chief examiner of the civil service commission, should not be trifled with. It should be treated with down-right earnestness. It is an important matter because it is the introduction of a new system which cannot meet with success unless men of solid character and good ability are on the commission. The commission should make haste to drop Mr. Keim, and select some one against whom the charge of unfitness cannot be made. This would honor the commission, materially help the civil service system, and likewise be a credit to the republican party.

A PLEA FOR WOMEN.

Under the new civil service rules women will likely receive fair play, because as we understand it, there is no unjust discrimination on account of sex. It has been the custom for all time—since the government was founded—to pay women employed in the civil service, a smaller salary than men. The first-class men clerks, for instance, in the treasury department, which is the lowest class, receive $1,200 a year, but the women who do exactly the same work in the same room, and there are seven chances out of ten that they are more industrious, and competent than the men clerks, receive only $900 a year. And if the man should be promoted to the second class he could get $1,400, and should the woman follow him in the line of promotion for efficiency, she would get $1,200 only.

It is very strange that the rules of the government should make this difference in the salaries of men and women, especially when the women are found just as competent, usually more honest, and frequently more reliable, than men clerks. But the idea prevails among the government officials as it does among school officers, that it would not do, for some mysterious reason, to pay a woman as large a salary as they pay men, even though they do their work as thoroughly good as men can possibly do theirs; and this rule has been followed with more or less sternness by everybody who is compelled to employ clerical help. A woman who can teach school just as well as a man, and can exercise more patience than a man, and thus succeed better, will receive possibly $40 a month, while the man who does the same grade of work, but does not do it as well as the woman, will receive $60 a month! This unfair discrimination against women is found almost on every hand. Because it is one person's lot to have been born a woman, then it is assumed that she is unable to fill any but the lowest places, and even if she is as fully competent as a man to perform a given service, she pays a tax of ten or twenty dollars a month because she is not a man.

Under the new civil service rules it is possible that women will have fair play—a chance to compete with men for government positions, and when successful to receive the same compensation that a man would receive for the same service. Frederick Douglass once said that all the negro wanted was fair play—an opportunity to work out his own salvation. All that women ask is simple justice and fair play.

A Noble Charity.

New York, May 3.—Grace church memorial house, which has recently been completed in the rear of Grace church, at 94 and 104 Fourth avenue, has been formally opened. This is a charity similar to a French crotte, where poor workingwomen who have young children can leave them during the day.

Saved from Outrage.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 3.—A negro, named Jack Brantley, made a brutal assault upon a five-year-old child in a house on one of the principal streets of this city. Passed by men in the crowd, he was promptly arrested. Brantley was promptly jailed, and threats of lynching freely made.

Options on Real Estate.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 3.—This city is to have a real estate exchange board on the plan of that of Chicago. One hundred members start the association, which will open for business next Monday. The selling of options on real estate will be a feature of its business.

Strategic with a Desperado.

ROCKFORD, N. C., May 3.—A bloody fight occurred here between a white man named Budd Elliott and Charles McDonald, a negro desperado. McDonald's abdomen was cut open in the fray, and his wounds are thought to be fatal.

DOWN AND OUT.

The Elder Vanderbilt Follows Gould's Example.

And Retires from the Presidency of His Roads—But Retains a Sort of Supervisory Position.

New York, May 5.—The boards of directors of the New York Central, Lake Shore and Michigan Central roads met yesterday at the Michigan Central depot and elected the following officers:

New York Central & Hudson River road—chairman of the board of directors, Cornelius Vanderbilt; president, James H. Antier; first vice president, Charles C. Clarke; second vice president, Chauncey M. Depew; third vice president, H. J. Haydon; assistant to president, J. Tillinghast; treasurer, R. V. W. Rossier; controller, Isaac P. Chambers; secretary, E. D. Worcester.

Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad company—Chairman of the board of directors, William K. Vanderbilt; president, John W. Alden; vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, E. D. Worcester.

Michigan Central Railroad company—Chairman of the board of directors, Cornelius Vanderbilt; president, H. B. Lybrand; vice-president, E. D. Worcester; treasurer, Henry Pratt.

It will be noticed that, while Vanderbilt resigns from the presidency and leaves the position of chairman of the board of directors, he is chairman of the board of directors of the New York Central and Michigan Central roads, and devotes it upon those who have been actively engaged upon it before. It also illustrates that, in their management, merit is recognized by deserved promotion. The directors of the New York Central and Michigan Central roads, who are the Vanderbilt system, are thus assured as well as the permanent control of the Vanderbilt interest. The directors of the New York Central and Michigan Central roads, who are the Vanderbilt system, are thus assured as well as the permanent control of the Vanderbilt interest.

It is my belief that these corporations are all in sound condition and that every prominent position in them is filled by gentlemen who understand their duties and who will discharge them to the satisfaction of the stockholders. This fact has great influence with me in determining the course of action which I have, after long deliberation, decided upon. My judgment of the time has arrived when I owe it as a duty to myself, to the corporation, and to those around me upon whom the chief management will devolve, to retire from the presidency of the New York Central and Michigan Central roads, and to devote my entire time and energy to the management of the Vanderbilt system, which I have had the honor to be president for many years past. The meetings of all of them have been called at this time, and I have had the honor to be president for many years past. The meetings of all of them have been called at this time, and I have had the honor to be president for many years past.

COMPLIMENTARY RESOLUTION.

The following resolution was adopted by the New York Central board: Resolved, That the directors learn with regret the determination of William H. Vanderbilt to no longer act as president of the company. For nineteen years his administration of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad company and subsequently of the consolidated New York Central & Hudson River corporation, has not only secured the record of the business success, unexampled in the management of companies of this character, is due mainly to the skill and fidelity with which he has conducted the affairs of the corporation. The history of the New York Central and its allied system during the period of Mr. Vanderbilt's presidency is the story of the development of this country by the railroad, and his successful struggle to maintain the commercial supremacy of New York against the most able and energetic rivalry. While we recognize the force of the reasons given for his retirement from executive control and responsibility, we have with pleasure his statement that he will remain a member of the board and give to it the benefit of his experience and cordial cooperation.

A SHORT INTERVIEW.

New York, May 5.—Mr. William H. Vanderbilt was found at his home last evening. He had just risen from the dinner-table and seemed to be in excellent humor and health. In reply to inquiries about his retirement from the presidency of his roads, he said that all he desired to say was contained in the remarks that he had made at the meetings. In response to a question as to his health, Mr. Vanderbilt said that he had never felt better. He then drew on his overcoat, and leaving the house, walked briskly up the avenue. Mr. Vanderbilt sails to-day for Europe on the Britannic, and will probably come back on her return trip. His companions will be his uncle, Capt. John Vanderbilt, and his youngest son, George. Among his fellow-passengers will be Director Jeremiah Milburn, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad.

HOUSE VS. BICYCLE.

Boston, May 5.—Yesterday evening, which was the end of the fifth day in the six day contest at the Casino, the score stood: Horse, 75; Bicycle, 700 miles.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 5.—First race—A mile and a quarter: Thora, favorite, got the lead passing the stand, and was never headed, winning in a gallop four lengths the best of Checkmate, second, Jennie, third, a half length between second and third; time, 2:12.

Second race—Three-quarters of a mile: Orange Blossom, who had got the second place in the first race, came on and won by three lengths, Eva K. second, Beekmaster third. Time, 1:10.

Third race—A mile and an eighth: Highflyer won by two lengths from Sauterier, second, and Gilgai third. Time, 2:00.

Fourth race—A mile and a half, over six hurdles: Hood's two entries (Revenge and Mandrake), Charlie Bush and Florence 2, started. Revenge won in a gallop, taking the lead from the fall of the flag, was never overtaken, and won almost in a walk ten lengths in front of Charlie Bush, who suffered but little in the general decline this morning and was very strong this afternoon, $1.17 having been paid on the call. The general market was weaker on the call and weakened further after the call when they sold at $1.16. There is no impression against among local operators this afternoon that the market will be lower to-morrow.

The long interest being heavily purchased, a large reaction may occur at any moment, and will be welcome to the clique; but we look out for no permanent break and for reasons previously expressed consider wheat a purchase on all good reactions. Corn was more active and weak this morning, but reacted sharply towards noon, when June sold at 57 and July at 58 3/4.

On any strong points we consider corn a sale for the time being. Provisions after early weakness, became strong and excited McGough, applying the whip to lead.

Chicago Markets.

Chicago, May 4.

Messrs. Rodiger & Co.'s market letter of to-day says: Local scalpers and operators went home last night imbued with the idea that the market would break to-day, and came this morning determined to sell. Wheat opened at $1.17 1/2@1.17 3/4 for July and was sold and hammered down to $1.16 1/2, but while the bears were active selling we did not see that they were not coming in on the market. One of our prominent bear houses sold about a million bushels nearly at the bottom of the market. Towards noon, when the bears commenced to cover, it was found that there was wheat for sale, and the market recovered sharply, July advancing to $1.17 1/2. It would seem that the pool is operating principally in August at present, which suffered but little in the general decline this morning and was very strong this afternoon, $1.17 having been paid on the call. The general market was weaker on the call and weakened further after the call when they sold at $1.16 1/2. There is no impression against among local operators this afternoon that the market will be lower to-morrow.

The Lepor Hospital, Transcend, New Brunswick.

It is not easy to give an idea of the impression produced by the first sight of the lepers. Strong men have fainted and turned sick at the sight of such affliction. The ward first visited is that of the men. Here there are exemplified various stages of the disease. To an experienced eye some of these men look well and strong; but when they are looked at more closely, it is seen that they are either in the early stages of the disease, or that they are suffering from some other ailment. One of the surest indications of the disease is the contraction of the muscles between the thumb and index finger; this is said to be a peculiarity of the disease. The flesh becomes destitute of feeling; is insensible to burns or cuts; in these cases there is great internal suffering. There is now in the hospital a man whose aim in life seems to have been higher than that of his companions in misfortune, and whose habits are such that the offensive nature of the disease causes him intense mental agony. He is in appearance strong and active, and his manner most prepossessing. He takes pleasure in gardening and reading, and is a most interesting conversationalist. In the fatal malady has broken out after lying dormant for three generations. The most pitiful object in the house is a young man who presents an aspect scarcely human; he is swathed in flannel and seated in a chair near the stove; his face and hands are covered with white scales; his face, from which the nose has disappeared, is most fearfully distorted, and every now and then he gives a sort of whistling cough that seems to come from lungs in the last stage of decay. The Sisters say that his whole body is a mass of these dry white scales, that keep constantly falling off; in the morning his bed is covered with them. His voice, like his cough, though faint, is most thrilling, and haunts one for many days.

the age and entirely out of sympathy with the modern world which the rising generation is soon to take possession of. From the moment the boy begins to prepare for college he faces the past; educationally he lives in the past; and the work laid out for him the vaster will be the final gap between college life and real life. The intellectual habits acquired in school and college may possibly enable him ultimately to grapple with greater power and skill with the problems of real life, greater than that he would have gained had he been left entirely unschooled; yet in the administration of affairs he is likely to be distanced for the best part of his life by the unschooled, practical man who knows from early and real experience precisely what to do in any emergency. The young man fresh from school is apt to know with thoroughness much that the busy world has no use for. He has general notions of many arts and sciences, but his positive knowledge of the realities upon which such arts and sciences are based is usually next to nothing; still less does he know of the practical methods of men who apply them to human uses. His educational years have been spent mainly in a world apart from and largely out of relation with the modern world which he is to enter when his schooling ends. His education, admirable as it may appear from a theoretical point of view, seems rather to unfit than to fit him for practical life; and his real education has to begin afresh in the rude and costly school of experience.

A Father's Grief.

A week ago Saturday a young man named E. A. Cook coolly walked away in broad daylight with a glass show-case which stood in front of the Chicago Model Works, No. 107 Madison street. The case contained, among other things, a small model engine worth about one hundred dollars. Cook took the plunder home and discovered that the engine was out of order, so he stole another engine a day or two later—glass case and all—from in front of William Krause's place, No. 126 Clark street. Friday he had the "nerve" to take the first engine to Krause's place for repairs. Krause at once recognized the engine as having come from the Chicago Model Works, and after Cook had gone away Krause called at the works and learned what he had already suspected—that the engine had been stolen. Cook had promised to call for the repaired engine yesterday noon, and was there promptly on time. Detectives Ryan and Dooley were also there awaiting his arrival. When arrested he admitted everything and took the officers to his house, where he had the rest of the stolen property concealed. Cook, who is only eighteen years old, says he never stole anything before in his life, and that the stolen engines simply because he wanted to see how they worked. He was locked up at the armory.

Conscience.

ZORRA is a certain preventive of malarial troubles, as it keeps the liver active. It makes bilious fever impossible. On the same grounds it makes indigestion impossible and the blood pure.

It is a want of judgment to allow prejudice to prevent one from trying this remedy. The writer has seen many such, who, being persuaded, were surprised and gratified at the results. Try a 10-cent sample. Sold by Prentice & Evenson.
